

Whether going to church, the Easter parade or a summer picnic the gents are dapper and the ladies are in their finery.

Presidents Message

Jim Ege, President,
PENTWATER HISTORICAL SOCIETY

According to Adrian Higgins of the Washington Post homes in the 1700's were not the spacious abodes we have today. Space for the average farm house family was at a premium. As we walk the picturesque streets of Pentwater Village and see the renovations on the old Pentwater homes we can try to imagine what life was like back then.

At the start of the Revolutionary War Edward Parry was required, as an enemy agent to live in Sturbridge with a state legislator and soldier named Timothy Parker. He lived in a "spacious" 700 square foot farmhouse that he shared with his wife, five children, two maids and three laborers. Parry had a room to himself but it doubled as a clothes closet, storage for foodstuffs and a place to keep yarn and linen. If the home entertained any overnight

Amy L. Arnold to be Featured Speaker at the Pentwater Historical Society's Spring Dinner.

People interested in our local history and preservation should attend this dinner and informative presentation by Amy L. Arnold at the VFW Hall.

A professional preservation planner for Michigan State Historic Preservation Office, she has worked on a variety of facinating projects: surveying historic highway bridges in Texas, the Dorr Felt mansion in Saugatuck, the Asylum in Traverse City, the village of Homer and surveys of historic resources in state parks.

Amy currently is the project manager for a Preserve America cultural/heritage grant for southwest Michigan.

She has multipule degrees in history/anthropology from Western Michigan University and from Eastern Michigan University in historic preservation planning and served as the preservation planner for Michigan's State Historic Preservation Office, Michigan Historical Center, Department of History, Arts and Libraries for the past several years.

guests Parry was required to share his bunk! (a common practice of the day).

Almost every home had a common room for family gatherings which doubled for cooking and other daily chores. The room would be cleared at night for extra beds if needed.

Family of 10 living in 450 Sq. Ft! Historian Jack Larkin compares a home of a couple of thousand square feet for a childless couple with a two dogs today to a family of 10 living in 450 square feet clustered around a chimney in the 1700's. Today new homes average approximately 2,400 square feet and 39 percent of them are larger. More than 50 percent of new homes have three bedrooms and 37 percent have four or more bedrooms and the majority have two bathrooms. The average household is 2.6 persons.

Larkin has a new book entitled "Where We Lived: Discovering The Places We Once Called Home." The book is a good insight into how people lived in the past.

I wonder when we look at homes in Pentwater if we can imagine the original sizes of the homes. Some of course will remember the homes well having lived in them in their original state. Tax records will show the original "footprint" of the homes if one is willing to do the research. I further wonder if the grandchildren of today's residents who are renovating and enlarging the homes will think that those homes are too small and need to add space to accommodate their families?

What Pentwater Kids Will Miss Doing in the Twenty First Century.

By Bob O'Brien

These activities and everyday experiences are just a few of the many childhood memories that I and other Pentwater kids, remember from some eighty years ago.

- ♦ They will miss out on climbing and painting "PHS" and the year on the old water tower which stood near Bob Venn's house.
- ♦ They won't be able to enjoy sliding down the tubular fire scape at the old school house or hearing the school bell ring to let them know they will be late.
- ♦ They won't be swinging out over "Old Baldy" on a gunny sack tied onto a rope and letting go to see if they can reach the frog pond.
- ♦ They won't be taking polliwags from the frog pond to put in a fruit jar and watch them turn into frogs.
- ♦ They won't be hearing the old fire bell ringing to call the volunteers to save someone's home.
- ♦ They won't be skiing down "Sunshine Hill" in the ravine when winter comes and go home very cold but grateful that they can stick their feet in the oven of the old cookstove.
- ♦ They will miss being able to ride the old "PM" locomotive and be permitted to throw a shovel full of coal in the fire box or blow the whistle and ring the bell on the way to the Wye.

Bob O'Brien-1935

- ♦ They won't be walking along the railroad track in winter-time picking up pieces of coal for a needy friend or stick their tongue on the track in zero weather and try to get it loose.
- ♦ They won't be playing "Fox and Geese" or making "Snow Angels" in the snow outside of Miss Grants' kindergarten room.
- ♦ They won't be running on the old wooden pier on the North beach or hiding in the "cribs" or getting slivers in their feet.
- ♦ They won't see horses tied up the metal pipes on the main (Hancock) street.
- ♦ They won't hear the fish tugs warming up their engines before going out into Lake Michigan at 4:30 in the morning.
- ♦ They won't hear the Sears & Nichols canning factory whistle blow at 12 noon to remind them to get for home and don't be late.
- ♦ They won't be tying their sleds to the back of a farmer's horse drawn sleigh in the winter and go riding on Hancock street.
- ♦ These are just a few of the many acts of devilry we performed more than eighty years ago-no doubt there's many more!
